Co-Existing With Cancer Or You Thought Living With Your In-Laws Was Difficult

Synopsis

When Jack D. Ruda was diagnosed with a rare form of cancer his prognosis was bleak. With no effective treatment available, his physician gave him only two years to live at best with a zero chance of going beyond that time. Faced with the terrible reality of a terminal illness, Jack began a positive program that would enhance the life that was left to him. His first plan of action was to remove all source of stress from his life. Jack is now entering his 8th year. This book tells of his personal experiences, his sense of humor and strategy for survival. He is an inspiration to all who suffer a terminal illness and the loved ones who help them through it.

Customer Reviews

I happen to know something about mesothelioma, the incurable form of lung cancer that is the subject of Ruda's book. I have a very good friend who worked for Johns-Mansville which was the leading producer of asbestos, which causes the disease. Ruda offers a unique way of living with his cancer: he leaves it alone, and has persuaded it to leave him alone! Sounds crazy, but obviously, it has worked for him, and I see no reason why it can't work for anybody. The book fascinated me for its unique point of view, its reader-friendly style, and most of all, the inspiring way it helps, advises, and encourages.
